For over a decade, Robin Sherwood has worked with small and large businesses, non-profit organizations and trade associations for over a decade. Once again, she was the judge of this year’s Awards of Excellence in Educational Communications. As creative director and graphic designer, she collaborates with printers, freelance artists, copywriters and businessmen and women of all stripes to develop, design, and print marketing materials. From concept to printed pieces and web postings, Sherwood thrives on creating attention-getting meeting announcements, program guides, postcards, posters, newsletters, membership directories, event invitations and more.

Robin Sherwood, owner of Sherwood & Company, a graphic design and communications service, has worked with small and large businesses, non-profit organizations and trade associations for over a decade. Once again, she was the judge of this year’s Awards of Excellence in Educational Communications. As creative director and graphic designer, she collaborates with printers, freelance artists, copywriters and businessmen and women of all stripes to develop, design, and print marketing materials. From concept to printed pieces and web postings, Sherwood thrives on creating attention-getting meeting announcements, program guides, postcards, posters, newsletters, membership directories, event invitations and more.

A professional graphic designer by trade with an English degree and Writing minor, Ms. Sherwood began her career as a newspaper reporter for The Winsted Courier in the 1980s during the advent of desktop publishing and Apple’s first Mac computer. While at the paper she developed a keen interest in page layout and design in addition to photography and writing. Prior to starting her own venture, she worked for over six years in a variety of positions at a commercial print shop, a graphic design firm and an ad agency and public relations firm where she honed her technical, artistic and communications skills. CADF thanks Robin for judging this year’s contest.
